

THE SAINT PAUL HOTEL MOVES TO THE HEAD OF THE PACK OF ETIQUETTE CLASS OFFERINGS

2008 year-long schedule announced for Business Etiquette Classes and Children's Etiquette Classes

Saint Paul, Minn. (October 2007) – With nearly three years of virtually sold-out classes to its credit, The Saint Paul Hotel has assumed a dominant position in the Minnesota etiquette instruction market. This dominant position won't soon be lost, thanks to an ongoing stream of well-priced, expertly-run classes for people of all ages who are interested in brushing up their social skills.

New dates for the 2008 calendar include Business Etiquette Classes on Thursday, February 21, Thursday, April 17, Thursday, August 7 and Thursday, October 30, 2008.

The 2008 dates for the Children's Etiquette Classes are: Sunday, February 24, Saturday, April 19, Saturday, August 9 and Sunday, November 2, 2008.

"Social graces pay off on so many levels," comments Terrie Bulanek, The Saint Paul Hotel's Director of Catering, of the continuing demand for the Hotel's etiquette classes. "I think people in our region value manners and civility. People recognize that having a certain comfort with traditional social graces leaves a person better equipped to succeed in any endeavor where two or more people are together—so that could be at school, at work, or in any social situation."

Business Etiquette Classes

Taught by Angelyn Davis, president and founder of Etiquette, Et Cetera, The Saint Paul Hotel's Business Etiquette Classes help participants build confidence with business etiquette through question and answer sessions, trivia challenges, and activities. The course covers proper etiquette for meetings, electronic and face-to-face communication, dining, and common entertainment situations, including roles and responsibilities of guests and hosts. Each session runs from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., includes lunch and an etiquette handbook, and costs $55 per person.

Children's Etiquette Classes

Angelyn Davis also conducts The Saint Paul Hotel's etiquette classes for children ages eight to thirteen. During a three-course luncheon, young people participate in fun, memorable games and activities. The class teaches them to make proper introductions, give them skills for meeting and greeting adults and other young people, instruct them in dining etiquette, and provide tips on a host of important social graces. Each young person attending the luncheon will receive a take-home bag of goodies. Cost is $45 per child.

Reservations for Etiquette Classes can be made by calling (651) 228-3860.
